STOPPRESS -- PRESIDENT STOPPER BERNSTEIN HERE OCT. 1

Washington Post reporter Carl Bernstein will give the closing Friday lecture of Journalism Week at Concordia's Sir George Williams campus.

The week includes films (for Concordia students only), exhibits from Montreal's dailies and other publications, panel discussions and lectures.

All events are in Room 110 of the Hall Building, de Maisonneuve at Bishop.

The (3-day) week begins Tuesday the 28th, with a lecture by Mark Feiffer, well-known lawyer and specialist in the legal tangles of Canadian journalists. His talk, entitled "All the Prime Minister's Men", serves as an interesting prelude to the visit of Carl Bernstein, co-author of "All the President's Men".

Freedom of information is a point Feiffer is expected to expand on during his 1 p.m. talk.

Next in the packed schedule comes the film "All the President's Men", drawn from the Woodward and Bernstein chronicle of Mr. Nixon's White House. That's at 2 p.m.

A panel discussion on Wednesday at 1 p.m. entitled "Is Investigative Reporting Enough?" will feature panelist Jean-Pierre Charbonneau, investigative ace with La Presse and best-selling author of "The Canadian Connection", a no-holds-barred look at Canadian drug trafficking; also on the panel is Montreal Star columnist Jim Stewart who translated "The Canadian Connection" from the French and who also lectures in journalism here; the third panelist is Southam's national economics editor Don McGillivray whose column regularly appears in the Gazette. Moderator is Star associate editor John Dafoe, also a journalism lecturer here.

The panel discussion will be followed by a film, "The Front Page" at 3 p.m.

The week ends Friday, October 1, when Carl Bernstein will talk about "The Rinal Days". A press conference follows. (Regrets, but personal interviews unlikely to be granted.)
